Trip Introduction

Marshyangdi River Rafting considered as a standout amongst the best white water travels on the planet; this 35 km boating activity on Marshyangdi waterway can take as long as 2 days. The Marshyangdi River Rafting begins from 'Bhulbhule', which is around 5-6 hours drive from west of Kathmandu. The view seeing during the trek is consistently changing going from mountains, thick woods, open valleys to little ethnic towns, making it amazingly energizing and extraordinary. The waterway seethes through limited crevasses and ravines and past staggering Annapurna Mountains.

The difficult evaluation 4 to 5-rapids start on the very first moment and are for all intents and purposes nonstop to the take-out point, with steep, specialized and exciting rides through Himalayan view.

The Marshyangdi (or Marsyangdi) (Nepali: मर्स्याङ्दी, marśyāṇḍī) is a mountain river in Nepal. Its length is about 150 kilometres.

The Marshyangdi begins at the confluence of two mountain rivers, the Khangsar Khola and Jharsang Khola, northwest of the Annapurna massif at an altitude of 3600 meters near Manang village. The Marshyangdi flows eastward through Manang District and then southward through Lamjung District.

The Marshyangdi joins the Trishuli near Mugling as one of its tributaries.

The beginning of the Annapurna Circuit trekking route follows the Marshyangdi river valley.<sup>[1]</sup>
